Because 'giftedness' is typically concentrated in one area and doesn't refer to overall intelligence, the focus of an IQ test.. 'Many parents of kids under 5 look to IQ tests for a number that will 'prove' their child's ability.

This is a school you can't buy your way into The fact that the school is right downtown, Bloor and Spadina, and that the student body has great influence on various extra curricular programs, including running weekly whole school assemblies, the school teaches independence and leadership, while still fostering social skills and catering to the demonstrably gifted.. Nov 10th, 2017 12:39 am If you think your child will get a better experience (school or other) in Markham vs San Fran, I would question your own cognitive thinking.. )' (source: ) At 5 years old, they spend barely 4 hours a day in 'class' This entire thread boggles my mind.. He is a high schooler now, but we kept him in the public school system in the gifted program, but had him in lots of other activities.. Parenting & Family Gifted school in York Region I suggest you pay a visit to the elementary school in your district that offers the gifted program and interview the teacher.

From personal experience, the quality of education, extra-curriculars and student life experience are unmatched.. Any additional spots in upper years only become available if someone drops out The application process is extremely competitive, rivaling law school acceptance ratios.. The gifted program curriculum in school board doesnt do much, but it does force the kids to mingle with all children and also have kids who might have same interests / capabilities.

I'd also tend to shy away from the private schools also due to the reasons posted earlier (teachers are under-paid so there's a lot of turn-over and they're usually the least experienced).. In truth, IQ testing doesn't tell you much before the school years and even then is generally considered unreliable.. He was having trouble at school not because he wasn't stimulated enough, but because he didn't know how to deal socially with other kids.. It is very common (and somewhat ignored) that often students who test gifted at a young age are no longer in the gifted category several years later (same for ASD tests when administered at very young ages).. So money just doesnt get you into the school OP- Talk to schools, visit them and figure out if you want to send your kid there.. I have a gifted kid too, and we have had our challenges keeping him out of trouble and feeding his interest.. This is really important, as it helps you cope with peers of all kinds Dont just think for now ( about his behaviour or his lack of interest), think a few years ahead as to where he will need to be ( his social challenges might need more attention than his giftedness).. As the school has an extremely generous endowment and offers financial aid to anyone that requires it (assuming the child is successful in the admission process, the student body is extremely varied both financially and culturally.
